BOOK REPORT

Find inspiration in these pages to prevail over kings, cahoots, and clutter. —Shirley Venice

The Taming of the Queen

by Philippa Gregory ($28, Touchstone)
Henry VIII's last wife, Kateryn Parr, may have been a divisive figure in the Tudor Court but she prevailed in sticking to her gem-encrusted guns (and holding onto her life). A brainy and spiritual force, the guillotin didn't scare this queen.

The Underwriting

by Michelle Miller ($27, Putnam)
Who could have predicted that online cheating site Ashley Madison would be hacked as Michelle Miller's salacious novel about an upstart high-tech dating app seeking funding hit shelves? Talk about timing. This is an irresistible tale of IPO power and privacy.

Getting Things Done: The Art of Stress-Free Productivity

by David Allen ($17, Penguin)
With 100 emails unanswered daily, meetings eating into work, and other urgent duties unfulfilled, it is little wonder that Allen's updated 2002 hit keeps pace with how we clear our minds and organize our thoughts.
